In other words, does the District need to complete the first set of “violations” in their entirety or can they unilaterally decide not to repair one or more of the “violations” and substitute a “newly” approved violation in its place? The issue is can bonds sold or taxes levied for a list of identified projects be used for other projects that are substituted for the original projects with the intent being the original projects will not be completed or will be completed after the “newly” approved violations are repaired?

10-063	10/05/10	Scott O'Connell	Unknown	3) In addition, this F.O.I.A. request is for all legal opinions -- labeled "Formal", "Informal", "Memorandum" or some other title -- issued by the ISBE since 1963 that address the issue of whether or not all of the code violation repairs need to be "accomplished and paid for in full" before any new projects can be undertaken with the original tax proceeds (levy and/or bonds). The issue is can taxes raised and/or bonds sold for a list of identified projects be used for other projects before all of the original projects have been accomplished and paid for in full? 4) And finally, this F.O.I.A. request is for all legal opinions -- labeled "Formal", "Informal", "Memorandum" or some other title -- issued by the ISBE since 1963 that address the issue of whether or not the District has the authority to levy and/or issue bonds under either Section 17-2.11 or Section 17-2.11a at an amount equal to the "estimate" for the repair instead of the "actual" contracted amount when the estimated cost to effectuate the repairs is greater than the actual cost contained within a board-approved contract. The issue is when taxes are levied and/or bonds sold for a list of identified projects, must the District utilize a known, actual contracted cost when levying taxes or issuing bonds instead of the prior estimate when the estimate is greater than the known contracted cost?

				For example, if after 1) both the ROE and ISBE have reviewed the reasonableness of the “estimates” of the licensed architect/engineer (ISBE Forms 35-48 and 35-76) per statutory direction (Section 17-2.11), 2) both the ROE and ISBE have approved the “estimates” as being reasonable and 3) both the ROE and ISBE have approved the use of Fire Prevention and Safety funding in repairing the violations, the Board of Education approves an actual contract for the “violation” project at a cost less than the “estimate”, does the Board of Education have the statutory authority to levy taxes and/or issue Page 4 of 4 bonds in an amount that exceeds the “actual” known contracted cost for the project knowing full well that there will be a surplus of idle funds remaining when the project(s) is completed?
