Financial aid regulations assume that a student's family has primary responsibility for meeting educational costs. If you are considered a dependent student according to the standard financial aid definition, your aid eligibility is determined by using parent income and asset information in addition to your information.

Am I a Dependent or Independent Student?

A student's dependency status is determined based on their responses to specific questions on the FAFSA or CADAA application. For financial aid purposes, an independent student is defined as someone who meets any of the following conditions:

- Born before January 1, 1997;
- Married as of the date aid application signed;
- Attending Graduate level program of study during the 2020-2021 academic year;
- Currently serving on active duty in U.S. Armed Forces (other than for training);
- Veteran of U.S. Armed Forces (or will be a veteran as of June 30, 2021), or have attended a service academy and were released under a condition other than dishonorable;
- Have children who receive more than half their support from the student, or has legal dependents, other than a spouse or children, who live with student and who receive more than half their support from the student between July 1, 2020 and June 30, 2021;
- Is/was an Emancipated Minor or in Legal Guardianship as determined by the court in his/her state of legal residence;
- At any time since you turned age 13, both your parents deceased (Orphan), were you in foster care or, a dependent or ward of the court
- At any time on or after July 1, 2019, a self-supporting unaccompanied youth who is homeless or at risk of homelessness (as certified by a high school, school district homeless liaison, governmental or school agency).

A student that does not meet any of the above conditions is classified as a dependent student.

What is a Dependency Override?

A dependency override occurs when a financial aid administrator exercises professional judgment and overrides the standard criteria on the FAFSA or CADAA application for dependent students. An override may only be granted on an individual case-by-case basis for students with unusual and exceptional circumstances. These circumstances must show a compelling reason for a student to be considered independent.

What conditions might warrant a Dependency Override?

A dependency override might be warranted for unusual circumstances which includes, but is not limited to:

- The student is unable to locate their parents,
- Abandonment by parents or
- An abusive family environment that threatens the student's health or safety (physical abuse, emotional abuse, sexual abuse, sexual orientation)

What conditions do not warrant a Dependency Override?

Federal regulations state that none of the conditions listed below, singly or in combination, qualify as unusual circumstances meriting a dependency override:

1. Parents refuse to contribute to the student's education.
2. Parents are unwilling to provide information on the FAFSA or CADAA application or for verification.
3. Parents do not claim the student as a dependent for income tax purposes
4. Student demonstrates total self-sufficiency.
