Social/Emotional Check-In:

As we wrap up the year, we will be sharing some ways for you to support your student with the end of year and start of summer. Here's the first idea:

Consider stretching your child's thinking about their day-to-day behavior. When discussing the school day, consider asking questions that elicit your child's thoughts, feelings, and experiences...

What did you do today that made you feel good?

What is something nice you did for someone else today?

How did you show kindness today?

Did you observe an act of kindness today?

You can also model sharing for your child by describing your own day's experiences at work, around town or within your home.
