C. Public Comments/Questions: Chair Mirliani read two public comment emails.

1. What is the plan for cancelled IEP / 504 Meetings? Can these be done virtually? Now that the closure has been extended will another offer of technology be sent? I have heard some parents passed b/c they could survive, but now that home school, working remotely etc are more in demand, sharing devices is not always working.

What is the plan for home schooling over the next month? What are the teachers responsibilities? Are they required to work or doing because they want too? I think understanding how things are set up and what is required and not would be helpful. Especially when parents are noting differences. Also I think its great that teachers are holding morning meeting and feel they should be required not optional...seriously parents are ok with kids sleeping to 10 and missing school meetings...OMG sorry.. I know that's not your issue...just sharing.

When will reports (especially the superintendent report) be available on the website to follow along?

And way to early to discuss, but also a real reality, what happens when the school year is cancelled? I know you can't control any of it, but what's the plan, the Fall is going to be so rough making up for so much lost time. Luckily everyone is in the same boat.
Lastly, THANK YOU, I know none of this is easy, none of this was planned, and everyone is going to have amazing BCP plans going forward, there will never be another snow day cancellation.

Hang in there, stay healthy!!!

Thanks
Catherine Hoberg

2). I just wanted to express that as a parent of a 5th grader at the Dean S Luce, I have been incredibly impressed with how well her teacher has handled both communication & resources from the time school was originally cancelled on 3/19/20 through just moments ago with a zoom classroom check in. I cannot personally speak for what other teachers are or are not doing but I believe I have heard many teachers are taking the same approach. These teachers should be commended for coming together like this. Staying in communication even if just via email is so important and can be so instrumental for these kids during what is otherwise a period of uncertainty, unknown & even frightening. Our teachers have reminded us all how truly important they are in all of our lives.
