Priority Challenges

Analyzing Priority Challenges	Priority Statements
	If educators provide targeted, data-driven instruction and interventions based on students' individual math needs, then students will demonstrate increased understanding and achievement in mathematics, and overall performance gaps will decrease as students gain confidence and proficiency in key mathematical concepts.
	If educators implement explicit, evidence-based reading instruction and provide timely interventions aligned to students' literacy needs, then students will make measurable gains in reading fluency, comprehension, and overall literacy, and the number of students reading on or above grade level will increase.
	If schools build strong relationships with students and families, implement consistent attendance monitoring, and address barriers to regular attendance, then student attendance rates will improve, and increased instructional time will lead to higher levels of academic engagement and achievement.

Goal Setting

Priority: If educators provide targeted, data-driven instruction and interventions based on students' individual math needs, then students will demonstrate increased understanding and achievement in mathematics, and overall performance gaps will decrease as students gain confidence and proficiency in key mathematical concepts.
