Promoting Independence: Use of Prompts at Home

Presenters: Jason Jobb and Claire Smith

– Click Here to Register for Promoting Independence

As parents, we want our children to be healthy, happy, and successful. During this unusual time, moms and dads have been working extra hard to provide educational opportunities for their children during remote and hybrid instruction. Providing the appropriate level of support for our children to be successful is necessary but we must also consider eliminating or fading support over time, so our sons/daughters become more independent. This training will be an overview of how to use and fade prompts to promote success when learning at home. The course will also address the use of reinforcement to increase the appropriate behaviors we want to see from our son/daughter.

Setting Up Home Environments for Success

Presenters: Ashley Ciecko, Julie Meginniss and Claire Smith

– Click Here to Register for Setting up Home Environments

Presenters will engage the audience in conversation surrounding different considerations to be made when setting up an at-home workspace for remote learning, homework, or additional studying done at home: choosing a location, eliminating distractions, furniture and seating, lighting, supplies, personalization, and more.

Routines at Home

Presenters: Beth Bergfeld and Lynn Moynihan

– Click Here to Register for Routines at Home

This parent training (discussion) on routines will offer helpful ways to structure your students summer schedule incorporating activities, learning, and leisure. We will suggest activities to prevent academic and behavioral regression during the summer months. In addition, we will include suggestions for transitions back to in-person learning for the 2021-2022 school year. Strategies will encompass all developmental levels.
